THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF QUESTIONABLE ACTS-GENERALS THOMAS AND SHERMAN ON THE STAND-THE SENATE REFUSE TO HEAR SHER-MAN'S ANSWERS-BUTLER'S ASPERSIONS-THE SENATE SUSTAINS THE CHIEF JUSTICE—SHERMAN TENDERED THE WAR OFFICE.

WASHINGTON, April 11 .- IN THE HOUSE, Woodward introduced a bill to test the constitutionality of questionable acts of Congress, which was referred to the Judiciary Committee. The act provides that if the Attorney-general shall bring in any bill vetoed by the President on the ground of unconstitutionality, and passed over the veto, before the Supreme Court on a feigned issue, the decision of the Supreme Court on such feigned issue shall be

In the Senate, the managers asked for an amendment to the rules, whereby each side might speak without limitation to members. Howard objected, and the motion goes over. General Thomas was again on the stand, undergoing a perplexing cross-examination by Butler. General Sherman was on the stand; the managers object to the evidence. Another very sharp contest is pending.

Stanbery, Evarts, Butler and Wilson participated in the debate to-day. Stanbery called on the Chief Justice during the debate to stop Butler's personal aspersions.

In the course of the examination of General Thomas the fact was elicited that the President's words to him were "go and take charge of the War office," instead of "possession of the War office." General Sherman was examined concerning his interview with the President in December, relative to the War Department. Mr. Stanbery said he would prove by General Sherman that the President wanted him, Sherman, to take the War office to secure a judicial decision of the question. Butler objected, but Chief Justice Chase ruled that the question was admissible. The ruling was then appealed from and rejected by the Senate by a vote of twenty-three to twenty-eight. Among the Republicans voting with the minority were Sumner, Fessenden, Fowler, Sprague, Van-Winkle, Anthony, Grimes, Morgan, Trumbull and Willey. General Sherman then testified that the President had tendered him the War Department on two occasions, namely on the 25th of January, and again on the 30th of Jan-

During the examination of General Sherman by Mr. Stanbery, the Senate refused to hear the answers to all the most important questions put to the witness. Pending the examination of General Sherman, the Court and the Senate adjourned.

ASHLEY, THE IMPEACHER.

Mr. Ashley, of Ohio, was the big gun of a Republican meeting held in Columbia on Friday. The Phœnix dispatches him as follows: Air. Assiey criticized and commended the Reconstruction acts, suffrage, education, social equality, etc. He maintained that Congress, on behalf of the successful party in the late war, had a perfect right to dictate terms and exact guarantees for future good behavior; contending that it was the leaders who should be punished, if punishment was to be inflicted; but contents the concentration and the superior of the content late war, had a perfect right to dictate terms and exact guarantees for future good behavior; contending that it was the leaders who should be punished, if punishment was to be inflicted; but, contrary to general expectation, punishment had not been meted out. He contended that the colored man was entitled to suffrage—here as well as at the North; and when reminded that in the State which he represented (Ohic,) negro suffrage had been voted down, declared that "two wrongs ald not make one vight:" he believed in universal suffrage, as a so doing, he was not brought into intimate association with the white race. Education association with the white race. Education and the ballor-box were essentially necessary. He was interrupted repeatedly during his re-marks, but was not disconcerted, and replied pleasantly. Sudden showers scattered the crowd several times, but the speaker remained firm, proclaiming himself a good Baptist, and was, therefore, not afraid of a little water.

CHARLESTON, S. C., MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 13, 1868. THE PRESIDENT'S TRIAL.

DETAILS OF THURSDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

RESUMPTION OF THE IMPEACEMENT TRIAL-FIRST APPEARANCE OF THE DIPLOMATIC CORPS IN THE GALLERY OF THE SENATE CHAMBER-ENTBANCE OF THE MANAGERS-BUTLER RE-MANDED TO THE TAIL OF THE PROCESSION-MASTERLY SPEECH OF MR. CURTIS.

The impeachment trial was more densely crowded on Thursday than on any preceding day, and the proceedings were unusually interesting. The correspondent of the Baltimore Gazette writes on Thursday evening as follows:

"Curtis is to speak to-day" was in every person's mouth this morning, and at an early hour the ticket-holders were wending their way to the capitol to secure favorable seats for hearing the opening speech in defence of President Johnson. The approaches to and through the capitol were lined, as before, with liveried policemen, and the Senate chamber presented nothing new in appearance except that the capitol were lined, as before, with inversed policemen, and the Senate chamber presented nothing new in appearance, except that the diplomatic gallery was crowded for the first time during the trial. Heretofore the foreign ministers have hesitated about attending the trial, doubting, as they did, the propriety of it, in view of the fact that they regarded impeacument but a partisan movement against the head of the nation to which they had been accredited by their respective governments. Now that his defence has commenced, they feel no hesitation or delicacy at attending. Mr. Thornton, the English Minister, although officially the youngest member, was the first to enter, followed by Baron Gerolt, the senior of the corps. Others crowded in until their section of the gallery was full. The other immense galleries were packed with a brilliant crowd, two-thirds of whom were ladies, not likely to listen with much interest to a dry legal argument. General Sherman entered the chamber a few moments before the session opened, and took a conspicuous seat immediately in front of the Chief Justice, which he continued to occupy during the whole day, he continued to occupy during the whole day, occasionally passing a word with Senator Stewart, of Nevada, who sat at his left. In this position the general was the observed of all observers.

A lively conversation was kept up in the Senate on general topics until the managers were announced. These entered, not by twos as before, but in Indian file, Bingham heading the line and Butler playing the part of the tail. What brought upon him this disgrace no one could tell. It was only known that at the opening of the last session Bingham and Butler entered arm in arm at the head of the managers, and since his efforts in behalf of impeachment he has been sent to the foot by Bingham. When the sergeant-at arms of the Senate announced the House of Representatives, twenty-four members entered to consenate announced the Rouse of Representa-tives, twenty-four members entered to con-tinue, "in the name of all the people," their prosecution of the President for high crimes and misdemeanors. Stanbery, trim as a blood-ed racer, entered the main door, and bowing to the right and to the left as he returned the salutations of senators, passed up the main aisle and took his accustomed seat. Curtis, followed by Evarts, Groesbeek and Nelson, entered a side door, and deposited himself behind a fearful number of volumes himself behind a fearful number of volumes which had been carefully arranged on the table. All eyes were now turned from Sherman to Curtis, and breathing seemed to be for the time suspended. On motion of Senator Johnson, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with. Horror of horrors! Butler calls another witness. Spectators are disgusted. Wood, carpet-bag man of Alabama and a Union soldier, is sworn: Had applied to the President for an office; couldn't get it. President had offices only for his friends. Motto evidently was, "Justice to all; favors to friends only." Stanbery blew this witness sky-high by inquiring if he did not tell his friend Coppell that he had been advised it would be to his interest to testify against the President. Blodgett, ne had been advised it would be to his interest to testify against the President. Blodgett, postmaster at Augusta, Ga., also had his private griefs, and after being sworn, told how the President had suspended him from office on the 3d of January last, but did not tell the cause of his suspension. If the game was worth the trouble, this fact could also be established.

THE GREAT SPEECH. Curtis now arose, amid profound silence, and delivered a speech worthy of his reputation; and this is the highest compliment which can be paid it. It was a solid pyramid of legal granite, with its foundation laid deep and wide. Step by step he brushed away the trashy positions of the impeachers, and erectlay. The Phœnix dispatches him as follows:

Mr. Ashley criticized and commended the deconstruction acts, suffrage, education, Senate and galleries spell bound throughout at Con-in the man, and such men, scarce, moved in their terms places, while the speaker con uded the adus delivered its funeral oration to-day.

HOW GENERAL SHERMAN BEHAVED. Lieut, Gen. Sherman, who occupied a seat by Senator Doolittle, never once took his eyes off Mr. Curtis. When the language of Senator Sherman, in the debate on the Tenure-of-office bill, that the bill had no reference to the Cabinet officers of Mr. Johnson, was quoted, Gen. Sherman looked hard at his brother, and the latter cast down his eyes. The venerable Thomas Ewing, whose nomination to succeed Mr. Stanton is yet unacted on in the Senate, sat on the other side of Senator Doolittle, and seemed particularly interested in the allusion to the debate of last winter.

THE HAPPT COLFAX. The House of Representatives was constructively present, but it was there bodily in the shape only of about twenty members, the impeachment proceedings having so soon lost all the novelty. Speaker Colfax, who sits at the head of "his boys," appears to be in the best of humor, no matter what is said or done, and never for a moment stops laughing.

TAMPERING WITH SENATORS. It is reported that the managers of impeach-It is reported that the managers of impeachment are seeking testimony to prove that efforts have been made by the President to secure votes of senators for acquittal in the impeachment trial. Mr. Johnson, if applied to, will furnish the managers with the names of five persons whom he has employed for this purpose, viz: Messers. Curtis, Stanbery, Evarts Greesbeek and Nelson. Senators are notified that these are the only authorized agents of the President for the purpose mentioned.
